 Download the briefing cards [1]

These briefing cards detail the linkages between sexual and reproductive health and rights (SRHR) and other key development issues including environmental sustainability, gender equality, economic growth, educational attainment, and broader health goals. They present key facts about the impact of SRHR on the broader development agenda and make recommendations for inclusion of SRHR in the post-2015 development framework.

The briefing cards, produced by FCI and co-authored by partners in the Universal Access Project [2], which aims to bolster the U.S. Government's support for international reproductive health and family planning, can be used by a wide range of advocates (in the U.S. and other countries) to make the case that governments must ensure the comprehensive inclusion of sexual and reproductive health and rights within the post-2015 development framework.
